

My family and I oppose the proposal to loosen the decency standards on broadcast television and radio to include allowing harsh profanity and nudity. We presently have digital cable but refuse to subscribe to any of the movie channels because of these crass and offensive materials. Likewise, we choose our radio stations by the same standard. Likewise we see very few movies in the theaters, or on streaming services like NetFlix, for the same reason. That is our choice to eliminate programming that people call entertaining and 'good' because we don't want to be subjected to the immoral standard being embraced by so many.

We feel that is our right – to have access to entertainment that doesn't require us to be subjected to a barrage of images and language that we feel is degrading to the mind and soul of man. I don't like that so many embrace this stuff, but as long as we have reasonable alternatives, I feel it tolerable.

If you make these changes, then we will lose this opportunity. We will have no choice but to eliminate these services altogether, or support only the few, independent, stations that might still stand for moral and decent content. It appears that you want to make these changes only because of your backlog and the work required to deal with it. Your logic here is faulty, because as soon as you loosen the standard, there will be those who will push and challenge that. You will find yourself still in the same position as watchman on the tower.

I have counseled with many people over the years that tie many of their issues with sexual addiction to the easy access of sexual illicit materials. Please don't make it easier! Society is shaped by what our entertainment contains – a fact that both Hollywood and the News media have learned to exploit. These groups have broken trust with the people of the United States by turning a blind eye to decency and honesty. Please don't make it easier for them to shape and corrupt our society.

As the morals of a society decay, so then do the laws. Its interesting isn't it that decaying cultures always have immoral entertainment. Please draw a hard line and refuse to make the already loose regulations any more permissive.

Have the courage to say this won't happen on my watch!
